Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

It was a quiet Saturday afternoon when Laila decided to stay home and study for her final exams. The streets outside were empty, and the only sound was the soft ticking of the old wall clock. As she turned another page of her science book, she suddenly heard a scratching sound near the window. Thinking it was just the wind, she ignored it and continued reading. But the sound grew louder. Curious and a little nervous, Laila walked to the window and gently pulled the curtain aside.

To her surprise, a small injured bird was sitting on the windowsill, its wing trembling. Without hesitation, Laila opened the window and carefully picked up the tiny creature. She placed it in a small box lined with an old towel and brought it some water. The bird drank a little and then closed its eyes. Laila smiled, feeling both proud and responsible.

The next morning, she woke up early to check on her new friend. The bird looked stronger and even tried to flap its wings. Laila opened the window again, and this time the bird hopped to the edge and flew away into the bright morning sky. She watched it disappear among the trees, feeling a strange warmth in her heart.

That day, Laila realized that small acts of kindness could bring great joy. The little bird had come into her life unexpectedly, but it left her with a lesson she would never forget — compassion can turn ordinary moments into something truly meaningful.

12.The main idea of the passage is that …………………….. .
a) Laila was afraid of birds and hated seeing them
b) helping others brings happiness and meaning to life

a) she found a bird, cared for it until it healed, and learned the joy of kindness
b) she studied hard all day and took a nap
c) the bird built a nest in Laila's room and learned the joy of kindness
d) she was scared and called her neighbors for help to save the injured bird

15. ………………………………. changes Laila's day in the story.

a) The sound of rain outside
b) The clock stopping suddenly
c) The appearance of the injured bird
d) Unexpected visit from her friends

16.According to Laila's reaction to the injured bird, what can be predicted about how she might respond to challenges in the future?

a) She will ignore problems and hope they solve themselves.
b) She will face difficulties with patience, care, and responsibility.
c) She will depend on others to fix every situation.
d) She will avoid getting involved in emotional situations.

Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c, or d:

In today's world, automated machines play a major role in our daily lives. These machines are designed to perform tasks with little or no human control. They use sensors, computer programs, and artificial intelligence to complete jobs quickly and accurately. Automated machines can be found in many fields, from manufacturing and agriculture to healthcare and transportation.

In factories, robots work alongside people to assemble cars, pack products, or inspect items for defects. These machines can work continuously without getting tired, which increases production and reduces errors. In agriculture, automated machines help farmers plant seeds, water crops, and harvest food more efficiently. This technology saves time and labor while improving the quality of products.

Automated systems are also becoming more common in our everyday lives. For example, self-checkout machines in supermarkets allow customers to scan and pay for items without a cashier. Smart home devices can control lighting, temperature, and security automatically. In transportation, self-driving cars are being tested to make travel safer and easier.

However, automation also raises important questions. Some people worry that machines will replace human workers, leading to fewer job opportunities. Others believe that automation will create new kinds of jobs and improve living standards. As technology continues to advance, it is important for societies to find a balance between human skills and machine efficiency.

Automated machines are transforming the way we live and work. They offer speed, accuracy, and convenience, but they also challenge us to adapt to a rapidly changing world.

20. The main idea of the passage is that automated machines ....

a) make life harder for people to live
b) are replacing all human workers
c) are changing the way people live and work
d) are only used in factories

22.The concept of automation developed in the text by …………. .

a) providing examples from different fields
b) comparing machines with animals
c) presenting one example only
d) telling details about the history of machines

23.According to the author's attitude toward automation, we can infer that he……….

a) believes automation is completely negative
b) supports automation but sees its challenges
c) dislikes technological progress
d) wants all jobs to be replaced by machines

24. If automation continues to grow in the future ,……………. .

a) machines will stop working in factories
b) people will avoid using technology in their lives
c) societies will need to adapt to new types of jobs
d) all machines will be removed from daily life

25. Which statement shows two conflicting arguments in the passage?

a) Machines are fast and people are slow.
b) Some fear job loss while others believe automation creates new jobs.
c) Farmers use automation but doctors don't.
d) Automation only helps factories and people fear using them.

26. Through reading the passage we can say that ……………

a) Automation improves efficiency but requires careful management
b) Automation destroys the environment
c) Automated systems are not used in modern life
d) People should stop using machines and do most work manually

27.People's feelings and intentions toward automation changed throughout the text as they…..

a) move from excitement to complete rejection
b) are described as balanced both hopeful and cautious
c) are angry and confused about new machines
d) become careless about technology

41. First, Dantès' supposed friends, Danglars and Fernand, pretend to support him but secretly betray him. Second, when Dantès is imprisoned, almost everyone abandons him . This shows that real friendship is based on trust and loyalty, not on personal gain. These examples prove that in Dantès' world, true friendship is extremely rare, and betrayal often hides behind a smile.	41
Deeds not words \ Talk is cheap In relationships: don't say "I love you " but show me help and care . In leadership\ teaching\parenting : leaders, teachers or parents are more effective by showing procedures not giving verbal instructions . If you want to know someone's mind, listen to their words if you want to know their heart , watch their actions .	42
